Times Colonist staff Central Saanich homeowners whose wells are running dry have run out of time for getting federal money. Residents on Senanus Drive and d Mount Newton Cross Road failed to secure money for an $800,000 project to hook them up to the municipal water supply after council decided not to forward the grant application in a bitter debate. But at this week's council meeting, the residents asked council to put "antagonistic attitudes" behind them and try again to get adrinkable water supply.

Frank Towler, the residents' spokesman, said the group was prepared to work with a council committee to answer community questions about what would happen if the residents hooked up to the water line.

Some opposed to the water line extension wanted to know how it would affect local water supply.

The committee's recommendations may lead to the residents getting a potable water source.
